Brief Introduction

As technology changes so too does the nature of our relationships. When I first started dating, if I liked a girl and wanted to ask her out I would call her house and HOPE she was home. I would have to get through the gatekeeper just for the opportunity to talk to her.

I had to impress her father, flirt with her mother, or deal with the brother who liked to tease her whenever a boy would call. All for the opportunity to try and say something cool enough to her that she'd say yes when I asked her out.

Those days are long over.

Now we communicate in one-sentence messages filled with symbols and misspelled words.

Everyone has a cell phone and these days everybody texts. It took a while but now my 65-year-old mother texts me all the time. I don't always have time to talk to her right when she wants to talk to me and vice versa. She knows that when I'm free I will respond to her text message.

For the same reason, texting has become a major component of the modern relationship and the truth is most people are awful at texting. It strips away all the life and subtlety from communication. Sarcasm is taken seriously. Jokes sound like threats. And flirting can make you come across like a stalker.

Something that sounds amazing out loud or even in your head can completely backfire if the person reading it doesn't happen to be in the right mood.

To help you avoid as many awkward and unfortunate moments as possible, I have created this guide to teach you exactly what to text and what NOT to text as your relationship develops. No matter where you are on the path to getting your ring, you can get a girl who gets texting. <if this is written from the guy's perspective (i.e., "you can get a girl"), why does it say "getting your ring"?>

Does Texting Really Matter?

In researching this guide I sent and received well over 15,000 texts with women. I am a big believer in research and I always want to test and retest everything I teach so that my material is always fresh, relevant and effective.

During the course of my research I began to form a real connection with one of the women with whom I'd been texting. We probably sent five thousand texts back and forth over the course of the two weeks before our first date. What makes her so unique is that she normally doesn't text.

We formed a real and powerful connection through this medium that lasted through our initial dates and now we are dating. She is my total dream girl and if you read my guide to online dating, ThePerfectProfile, she has every quality I wanted my dream girl to have.

Huge portions of this book are pulled directly from that conversational thread. If it weren't for Kyle, this book wouldn't be nearly as amazing.

So believe me, you can use texting as a major tool when it comes to catching Mr. Right. Her texts were so powerful that they made me not even want to reply to all the other women messaging me. She cleared away the competition with her mind.

Why Do Men Text?

Rejection stinks.

It's just awful and we don't have to have to deal with it. And the truth is that women are brutally unfair when it comes to the phone. If a guy makes one wrong move during that first tentative phone conversation, he will lose the chance to take you on a first date.

If a guy calls at the wrong time and you're busy, there is this immediately awkward conversation. He can feel himself losing and knows that just by him calling at the wrong time you will probably never go out with him. Does he just hang up and try again later? Now he's a guy who calls too much. Does he try and talk to you for five minutes? You are distracted and now you're annoyed that he interrupted you. Does he go straight to asking you on a date? Then he hasn't tried to romance you and suddenly the spark is gone.

It stinks but it's reality.

But if a guy texts you there is no risk of any of that. He can text you and knows that even if you are in a meeting, he hasn't messed up. You will respond when you are ready.

He can also avoid every man's nightmare: leaving a girl a message.

Every single guy on earth has left a girl an embarrassing message. I know that I certainly have.

"Hi.....um it's Jonathan.....we met at the Cowboy Bar.....I was wearing the blue shirt with the red bolo tie.....I'm sure you remember me.....I just wanted to say that I think you're a great girl.....not that I think you're a girl.....I know you're a woman and totally respect women.....I have a mom and three sisters myself.....Anyways, I was calling to ask BEEEEEEP....."

I have left almost that exact message at least twenty times in my life. And surprisingly it HASN'T led to a lot of return calls from women. ;)

When we are sitting there and the phone is ringing, we are developing our strategy for how we can get you to go on a date with us when you answer. No guy ever makes a plan for his answering machine message.

So we finally have a way to avoid this nightmare.

Even worse is when a guy calls but doesn't leave a message. Now you know he called but you're wondering why he didn't leave a message. And you are thinking what number is that? I don't recognize it so I'm not calling it back. So a day or two later he tries again, and you realize he called earlier but didn't leave a message.

So THAT's what you're thinking about when he finally does reach you to ask you out.

It's really a situation where a lot of things outside a man's control can cost him any chance of a date with a girl he likes.

So to avoid these situations and about twenty more I could write about – most men prefer to text.

The Advantages of Texting

1. You can reply at your own convenience –

When you get a phone call you have a maximum of thirty seconds to get ready and make a decision. Do I want to talk to this guy? Am I ready? I don't recognize this number.

You don't have to answer the phone while you're in the bathroom and then try to do the "silent flush" that you hope he doesn't hear because all men think women don't use the bathroom.

Instead you can just reply when you are good and ready.

2. You can use a team

He can ask his friends to interpret your messages and you KNOW you show every text he sends you to all of your friends to see what they think of this new guy in your life. And that continues throughout the entire relationship.

He can tell his friends what he is thinking of texting you and find out if it sounds lame or as awesome as it does in his head.

3. You can spend time preparing –

When you are on the phone you have to think of what to say instantly. There is no time and you have to be just as cool and flirty as you were the first time you talked.

Texting allows you to spend hours crafting the perfect response to his message. Should you send a smiley face? What about XOXO? Is it too soon? Will he think it's cute?

And if you think he just thought of you and texted you one minute later the afternoon after he met you – you are insane. He spent hours agonizing over that text. Writing and rewriting it to seem cool. Should he ask a question? He wants to force you to respond. Should HE use an emoticon?

Texting allows you all the time in the world to think of the perfect message.

4. It's low risk –

With texting you avoid accidentally calling while he's in a meeting or driving or eating. There's nothing worse than calling and realizing that a good time for you was not a good time for him.

All rejection via text is very soft. Rejection usually comes in the form of them simply not replying to your messages. This is a thousand times better than when a girl in high school told me on the phone that she didn't think I would remember her number and then hung up on me. Oh, how I wish we had texting back during my teen years. Instead I was stuck with a beeper that never did help my dating life....

Texting When You're Single

One of the most important things I have to teach the men I work with is how to actually take a woman's phone number. We all want to pretend that your number is the only one we got last night and that you only gave your number to one guy last night, but that's just not reality.

There is so much going on when you meet someone new. You are trying to take a peek at their body to determine how attracted you are. You are trying to learn about their personality without giving away too much. You are trying to see if you are really attracted to him, but you are also trying to see if he's really attracted to you. Emotions and hormones are raging. And memory suffers.

Sometimes I will meet a woman who is amazing. We spend three hours talking in a bar and she is the only number I take that night. Sometimes when I wake up the next morning, I couldn't describe her to a sketch artist.

I was so busy enjoying the conversation that I wasn't recording the memory properly.

Exchange Numbers

When you give a man your number you should ALWAYS take his. As soon as you give him your number, have him call you.

I can't stress how important this is.

This will avoid you having to send the "who is this?" text which KILLS early attraction between men and women.

Even if you're not interested in the guy, this will save you a ton of hassle. I know a lot of girls have the strategy of just never answering numbers they don't recognize. This is exactly how you will end up missing a diamond in the rough.

Save the numbers of the guys you don't want to talk to and you will never forget to save the numbers you DO want.

Use a Cute Nickname

You want to remember the emotion of your first interaction.

Was it playful? Intense? Emotional? Conspiratorial?

Do you guys have an inside joke?

If you save his name as Dan Jennings in your phone then you have immediately made him boring.

Women do this ALL THE TIME.

You don't take down a man's number or you save it in a boring way and you sterilize the conversation.

Now he is stored just like your boss. Your co-workers. The guy who cuts your cat's hair.

If you save him as "Secret Agent Dan" or "Dangerous Dan," you immediately retain some of the playfulness and fun of your interaction and store it in your phone. Now a nice piece of your interaction can travel with you. It will increase the odds that your connection lasts when he actually calls you.

It will also help you avoid running out of things to say during that first conversation if he actually does call you.

Take a Picture – It Will Last Longer

This is something that I forget all the time, but when I remember to do it I'm so grateful.

Take each other's pictures.

We all have smart phones now. Almost every single person who has a cell phone has a camera in it these days. And the best use of a cell phone camera is taking a picture of the new man you've met.

If you make it your standard operating procedure it won't feel weird.

Just make it your ABC: Give him your number. He calls you. Then say SMILE and take his picture.

If it's a natural part of your routine then nobody will bat an eye.

I take girl's pictures all the time when I meet them.

You can also go for the group shot if you want. "Let's take a picture together."

And then have him send it to you, or vice versa.

Now you can show your friends what he looks like when you are gossiping about him later on tonight or tomorrow. It helps a lot to be able to assess his looks under the cold light of day.

The BENEFITS

If you follow these three simple steps you will dramatically increase the value of your number exchanges. There will be no more of those awful, "Who is this?" texts. You won't be sitting there wondering why you gave this "Dan" your number. And you won't be struggling to remember how cute he actually is.

Sometimes attraction can dip overnight. You aren't in the fun emotional place you were in when you first met him. Suddenly you're wondering just what exactly you saw in that dude.

But when you have his number, nickname and picture saved in your phone you have an actual record of the emotion you felt during that initial encounter. This will transform your texts and phone calls into much better and more valuable interactions.

The First Text

There is a strong chance that your very first text exchange will set the tone for the entire relationship. For example, if you begin following a series of rules about how long to wait to text him back, etc., then you are starting to play games. And it will poison your relationship.

I can't tell you how many girls waited X amount of time to reply to my messages thinking that it will make me more attracted to her. She thinks she's playing hard to get. But she isn't being real.

I'm not going to give you a series of rules to follow when you're texting.

As soon as you're following a strict set of rules, you are playing a game.

I don't want you to start off your relationships this way.

The one thing I can say is that it's a good idea to maintain parity in your early communications. Send one text for each one you receive.

This is exactly the same thing I tell the men I work with.

It's ok to send two texts without getting a response but it's definitely not ok to send a third one. Texting is about having a conversation. Not sending a ton of messages and hoping for a reply.

I have seen this in men's and women's phones. They meet someone and they start texting. The person who is more interested way overdoes it by sending texts way more than the person they are trying to attract. If you are sending paragraphs and getting back one-word texts, please realize that your texting has gone severely off the rails.

Do you have his number?

The sooner you exchange the first text the better.

I think it's great if you do it right when you are talking to each other for the first time. It's cute and adds a nice foundation for BOTH of you when you start texting the next day and can't see each other.

The more elements you put in place to maintain the emotion and connection of the first meeting the better. That's the crucial element.

Texts While He Is Still There:

- ❖ In case you forget what I look like, here's a picture ;-)
- ❖ Don't forget my smile ☺
- ❖ Someone is listening to us! Shhhh :-X
- ❖ This message will self-destruct in 10 seconds...
- ❖ Never trust women in big hats!

Maintain the Flow of Conversation

You want to continue the conversation, not try to start a new one. In Girl Gets Ring, I talk a lot about maintaining humor and having inside jokes with someone you've just met. The more original conversational threads you have to choose from, the better.

What you want to avoid at ALL COSTS is the following thread.

- ❖ "Hi. It was nice meeting you last night."
- ❖ "Um, who is this?"
- ❖ "It's Mike from Sporty McRedneck's Bar and Grille."
- ❖ "Oh, the guy in the red shirt? It was awesome meeting you. What are you up to?"
- ❖ "I was wearing blue...."
- ❖ "Oh...I was thinking of a different guy."

That Actually Happened To Me!

Bad texting strategy led to some deep awkwardness and we lost the conversational thread.

Instead you want a text that just continues the conversation from last night.

- ❖ "The woman with the big hat yelled at me after you left last night!"
- ❖ "OMG are you serious?"
- ❖ "Yes, she heard everything we said and waited til you were gone to attack!"
- ❖ "That's so crazy. Are you ok?"
- ❖ "I have a few broken ribs, but I'll survive. What are you doing today?"
- ❖ "I'm at the mall with my girlfriends. Thinking of going to Billy Bob's tonight."

- ❖ “Sounds nice, maybe I’ll just see you there. ;)”
- ❖ “Gr8. ;)”

As you can see in this example, the conversation is continuing the joke about the lady with the big hat. And it flows MUCH more easily.

The responsibility for the first text rests squarely on the shoulders of the man. It’s not your job to initiate first text contact. But it IS your job to make it easier for him. The truth is most men have no idea what they are doing in relationships or in communicating with women.

So every step you take to make it easier for him to send an interesting text, the better your odds of a good connection. Even if a guy is amazing and you really like him, if he sends a bunch of lame texts even after reading this book, you will stop being attracted to him. It’s deeply programmed into your brain.

So you need to HELP him attract you.

You are ALLOWED to send the first text. Sometimes you gotta kick-start it with a guy and that’s ok too. I personally love it when a girl sends me the first text. I think it’s really cute and makes it easier for me. Sometimes I sit there spending HOURS agonizing over the first text I send a woman.

Even though I know all the right steps to take to maintain the flow of a conversation, the truth is that when I meet a girl I really like I get distracted and don’t follow my own rules. Our emotions often overrule our decision-making. I’m so caught up in the conversation that I end up shooting myself in the foot for later.

I know that I am probably crushing your illusion that I’m the perfect, super smooth James Bond of the 21st century, but that wouldn’t be reality. I make mistakes just like you and just like everybody out there.

So when I forget to take a picture or send the first text right away, and you are sitting there a day later wondering why you haven’t heard from me, I want you to realize something. There is a VERY GOOD chance I am sitting there agonizing over my phone trying to think of a super cool, original text to send you.

So feel free to save me from myself and send the opening text.

This book isn’t so much about giving you lists of texts to choose from, but nevertheless I am going to give you tons of examples, as it is about showing you the right mindset for communication within a relationship. Once you understand the right mindset, you will think of original messages that are based on your conversations with the men you meet that are thousands of times better than my generic examples.

First Texts The Next Day:

- ❖ I hope you know that I practice safe text.
- ❖ The woman with the big hat followed me home.
- ❖ Last night it was so awesome when...☺
- ❖ Do you always go to The HonkeyTonk?
- ❖ My shirt still smells like broccoli!
- ❖ Recovered from last night?
- ❖ How's your leg feeling?
- ❖ Do you like scary movies or comedies?

Test, Test, Test

I talk about this a LOT in my system for online dating and it's the same for texting. The more technology you have at your disposal, the more room there is for testing and experimentation to find out what exactly works best for you.

There is nothing wrong with giving your number to ten guys tonight and seeing what happens when you try out different texting strategies. Believe me, a lot of men out there are doing the same thing. It's just like an author finding your voice.

Operate with your Goal in Mind

Just as with all your conversations with men in person, you should know where you want things to go when you start texting a guy. Do you want to go on a date with him? Do you want to see him in a group setting again? Do you just want to text flirt? Do you want something purely physical?

What you want to avoid is ending up in a purely text-based relationship.

The Dangers of The Text Boyfriend

This is something so crucial that it needs its own box. Do not let your text relationship accelerate beyond your real-life relationship. I am talking about both the emotional and the sexual.

It will kill your relationships if you say "I love you" for the first time via text. When you see each other in person it's MUCH harder to open up emotionally, so now you've said something that you don't really feel ready to say in person. This will cause a crack in your relationship.

This is especially dangerous with online dating. The most important thing with online dating is getting to first contact as fast as possible. A lot of people send thousands of texts and messages and really open up to someone that they haven't actually met. This is super high risk and can damage intimacy in your relationship. You want to do all your bonding in person.

Then there is the whole topic of sexual texting. I talk about this a lot later, but it needs to be said again. I had a LOT of women send me extremely explicit texts very fast in the relationship. Some of them just had stock nude photos they seem to send to every guy they talk to and some took custom ones for me. The ONE girl who didn't send me even a suggestive picture is the one who caught all my attention. She's the girl I can't stop thinking about and the girl who pushed all the other ones to the side.

Let me say it again. Sending naughty pictures early on will make him see you as purely a sexual object. And if you just want a short-term relationship, then this is the path to take. Refusing to send naughty pictures will actually make him want you more and push you from the short-term to the long-term category.

It worked on me.

Remember that in this early phase a lot of guys aren't sure what to do. They are feeling you out to see if you are interested and will say yes to a date. Be ready for texts that are pinging you to see what your availability is. When he asks what you are doing tonight, if you tell him you have plans, it's very important to offer an alternative night.

It is VERY hard for men to know the difference between no and not yet.

If you aren't clear when communicating with a man via text, you will lose a lot of men who are actually interested but don't want to seem too pushy. In this day and age a lot of men will veer towards giving you too much space rather than appear too pushy or needy.

So now that you know what you want from your texting, it's important to communicate that to the man.

Let him know that you are available, and when you are available. I have met some amazing girls over the years that I met at the wrong time. They had no time in their schedule for a date for the next two weeks. That's plenty of time for me to meet someone new who does have time.

Texting Is Not Subtle

In Girl Gets Ring, you heard about The Mouse. She was the girl who taught me the importance of honesty. What I didn't tell you was that she taught me via text. I was so excited for our second date. We were going to a masquerade ball and I just LOVE costumes. She was so amazing because she loved costumes as much as me.

She sent me a text a few days before the ball.

"Did you buy the tickets yet?"

I immediately started interpreting. I freaked out and thought she was looking for an opportunity to cancel. With 90% of women that's what the text would have meant.

I had to text her back seeking clarification.

She just wanted to be sure that we were actually going before she bought a mask.

It's so rare in our society for people to actually say what they mean. I had to recalibrate my responses to her. She was very direct and always said what she meant.

You need to be careful in your texts to clearly communicate exactly what you mean. There is no intonation. There are no facial expressions. There is very little context. There is a LOT of room for misinterpretation.

Emoticons

Making those cute little faces in texts can make a HUGE difference. I know a couple of girls who told me that a guy sending an emoticon to them is an instant deal killer. They are the only two girls who have ever said that to me, and looking at how their relationships are going, I can tell you that you want to veer in the opposite direction.

There are hundreds of little emoticons out there, but there are less than ten that a man will understand, so you want to stick to those. You want to add the missing facial expressions to make up for the lack of tone in texts. You may have noticed that I have sprinkled a few emoticons throughout this book just to show you how they can affect the tone of a sentence.

;) ;o) ;-) - The Wink

There are some nice variations of this one. You can give your wink a nose or not. As you can tell, the nose makes it cuter. The wink lets him know that you are joking in a text. As you know by now, teasing is an important part of flirting. Look at these two messages.

I hate you.

I hate you. ;)

One comes off as super mean and one has a nice flirting tone. The wink is a lovely tool. I use it all the time.

☺ :-) :) :o) - The smile

A good smile always adds a nice tone to the conversation. This lets him know that you are being friendly. Sometimes a text can have a tone that's just too serious.

I can't wait for tonight.

I can't wait for tonight. :)

Can you see how the first text is just a little dry? The second one has some emotion and character.

You can use either type of eyes with a whole bunch of mouths to create different expressions.

;o\ :o\ - The slightly upset face.

This is one that I use to express displeasure. Usually when a girl says something that sounded mean in a text or when she is complaining about something in her life. When a girl tells me she has to work late, I usually reply with just this message to let her know that I'm feeling her pain.

:X – Then shut my mouth.

I just used this one yesterday when my friend told me she was in a meeting. It's a way of saying I'll shut up now. It's a good way of expressing that you feel like someone is telling you to shut up.

;P :p :oP - Stick your tongue out

I like to use this one when I'm teasing. It's pretty cute and a little sassy and just really works great.

Compare how the emoticon changes the meaning of this simple message.

- ❖ You are such a jerk.
- ❖ You are such a jerk. ;p
- ❖ You are such a jerk. ;)
- ❖ You are such a jerk. :)
- ❖ You are such a jerk. :/
- ❖ You are such a jerk. :X

These messages should all demonstrate a clearly different connotation to you. To me, each of these messages looks completely different and sends a VERY different message. Some of them are angry and some are quite flirty.

Naughty Texting

There's no point in dancing around it. A big part of texting is playing naughty games. As a guy I can tell you that I love naughty texts. Some girls have sent me texts that have gotten my heart racing! ;)

But there is an art and a subtlety to naughty texts that some girls just don't seem to grasp.

When I was 16 I was lucky enough that my parents could afford to buy me a nice car. They bought me a 5-year-old Honda Accord. It was AWESOME.

But I asked my dad why he didn't just buy me a brand new BMW.

He told me that if he did that, I would have nothing in my life to look forward to. I wouldn't be able to earn my own treats.

I have bought several cars since then on my own and he was right. I couldn't afford a BMW for almost 15 years after that birthday. Each time I bought a lesser car it would have been a disappointment.

In case I'm being too subtle, don't give it all away in one text! Men value what we EARN.

There are two main aspects to getting textual with a man, the verbal and the photographic. They are both very potent and sexy ways to build a powerful connection on their own, but if you combine them in the right way men will find you irresistible.

I want to talk about taking naughty pictures first because it seems like 95% of you are doing it completely wrong. Rather than draw pictures of exactly what you should be modeling, there are a couple of crucial rules I want you to follow.

1. The first time a man sees your intimate parts should not be in a text.

I have received this text several times lately, and while it's really cool it's one of the fastest ways to burn out a relationship in its early stages. Once you are dating there is a lot to be said for swapping super naughty photos, especially when he's at work and you want to keep him focused on you and rushing home.

But you need to BUILD to that. If he hasn't seen it in person, don't show it to him in text. This goes for anything other than your smile. You want to use texting to tease him and build his attraction so that when he sees you in person his desire for you peaks. This is how texting can help you really connect with a man.

2. Photography is about the Art of Seduction

The purpose of naughty pictures in the early phases is to draw him in to your sexuality. I know exactly what really turns me on fast, but more importantly I know what works on me, and they are NOT the same things. It's not that hard to give a man an erection. We wake up with one every day.

You want to think about SUBTLETY. It's amazing how many girls don't seem to follow this concept, so if you take the time now to employ this strategy, you will see men becoming a lot more attracted to you. Start off with a picture of you in a shirt with no bra and the lights dim. Then a picture of you in soccer shorts. Then a picture of you in your sexiest boots. Then a picture of you in a sexy dress.

Just writing that advice I can feel myself getting sexually frustrated and it drives me insane when a girl does this to me. But I stick around. I want to be there til the end and I become more and more invested throughout the process. This is how you become the only thing he's thinking about.

When you finally do show some skin, do it with the lights super dim. So he can see that you're in a bra, or topless, but can't really see it NEARLY as well as he can in person. The idea is to make the question of what you look like naked stronger in his head, not to answer it via text under the bright lights of a bathroom.

When a girl sends a man a picture of her special parts too fast, he is very likely to show it to all of his friends. But when you make it a seduction and he spends days or hopefully weeks slowly getting to see what your body looks like, then he develops an emotional attachment to your body and suddenly he becomes far more private about your images. If you act like your nudity is precious, he will start to treat it the same way.

3. Stock photos v Original

Guys know that you have 5-10 photos that you or your best friend took of you in various states of undress that you send to all the guys you meet. We are pretty simple but we aren't dumb. There's a lot to be said for having your seduction photos lined up in advance and slowly dripping them to the man you like over time.

You get to look exactly how you want and you look amazing. You can also test to see how far apart you should release the photos to get him on the hook.

The problem with stock photos is that they lack intimacy. They are closer and closer to pornography. Why should I think a picture is special when I know you've sent it to other guys? It takes away a TON of the specialness for us.

When you actually sleep with a guy, it's original. It's just you and him and that intimacy is a crucial part of a relationship. When you use your standard go-to photos with a guy, it takes away that intimacy. I know that a lot of girls get asked for naughty photos constantly, so it's also a time-saver. ;)

The best of both worlds is the approach to use. You want to mix in original photos with your stock photos. When a girl is texting me, I want to see what she looks like RIGHT NOW, not what she looked like seven weeks ago when the lighting was perfect. The intimacy more than makes up for the picture quality. The more professional a picture looks the less emotional connection I feel.

If it looks like a pic from a photoshoot, then it's cool but that's all. I won't feel any emotional connection. Of course if you want a purely sexual connection with a new guy, then this is fine to do. But if you want to have actual relationships, then you should use real photos that you take yourself while you're talking to him.

Every single guy is programmed differently. I think Kyle is the most beautiful woman I have ever seen and I feel attracted to her on a super deep and atavistic level. During our initial flirting phase she would only send me photos that were clearly from her Facebook page.

I had to earn each one and send tons of my own. It really built up the attraction over time and made me addicted to her. What she didn't realize until I told her was that one of the pictures she finds forgettable is my favorite picture of her. A lot of my friends don't think it's a great picture either, but when I saw that one I was like this is it. This is the girl.

That's when I knew she was amazing and that I needed to be with her.

She has tons of other pictures that she thinks are better, but this is still my favorite one to look at when she's at work and I'm at home writing this. Other guys would pick different pictures from her collection as their favorite.

So don't be afraid to send some of your less than perfect photos. Don't send any where you look terrible, but maybe the photo where you just look OK is the one that will make his heart skip a beat like mine did.

4. The Arc of a photo relationship

The faster you send a guy a picture of your vagina, the sooner the relationship will end. It's almost a perfect mathematical algorithm. To be honest I can't believe I'm saying this, because it's going to keep other men from getting naked pictures as fast as they want, but this book is about helping you catch and KEEP a man interested, and this is what works.

Just last week I started texting a girl and she took me through her five stock photos in about two hours. It was so obvious, but they were SUPER sexual. So she got me really horny, but then a day later we stopped talking. I'd already seen everything.

The time between your first meeting and your first picture to him of your lady parts is half the length of your relationship. If you wait two weeks, you have about two more weeks of relationship left.

Now there is a point of no return in a relationship where the picture no longer determines when the relationship will end. But I can certainly say that it's after you actually sleep together.

Think about phone sexuality as a mountain. It can either be really steep and you go straight up or it can be a gentle slope that takes ages to get up and ages to get down. That's the path you want to be on.

I can tell you something right now about the girls I spend the most time with. The ones who enthrall me never actually send me pictures of them completely naked. NEVER. As much as it pains me to admit, it's the ones who make me see in person that I want to be around.

There is a huge problem in our society. Everyone is so hyper sexual that they have forgotten what it means to be sensual. I read a book on sexual massage from the '70s when I was living in Japan. And it talked about the sexual experience taking hours. It was a long drawn out process where you would spend over an hour massaging your partner just to get PREPARED for foreplay.

Those days seem to be over. And it's a real shame.

The Art of Seduction

When you are texting photos to a man take the time to think about it as a seduction. If you can drive the train instead of him, then you will be able to determine where it goes. Don't just send a naked photo because he asked for one.

This rule applies no matter where you are in your relationship. If you have been with a man for ten years, you still want to think about what you want to happen. Do you want him to rush home from work today to take you on the front steps of your house? Or do you want him to become more attracted to you over the course of a few weeks?

Both of these goals have merit.

The longer you have been with someone who you HAVEN'T naughty texted with, the more you should ease into it. Start with the sensual. In fact, start with words and slowly introduce the pictures. Men are simple creatures but we still like to be seduced. If you take the time to do it right, he will be running red lights on the way home from work, rather than staying late at the office.

Getting Textual with Words

There are a couple of things that are crucial about being sexual textual with a man with words and these apply throughout the course of a relationship.

1. If you shut down his sexuality he will cheat on you

I can't express how important this is. A lot of men are VERY shy about their sexual proclivities and fantasies. So when he first expresses them to you in a text, if you shut him down, at some point in your relationship he will find a woman who won't.

I'm telling you this from personal experience. I have dated women who allowed my sexuality to flourish and I have dated women who made me feel like our sex life came with a rulebook. I hated the second group, but always put up with her for a little while because the sexual experience, while limited, was still sex. But I would never marry one of those girls. Nobody wants to marry them.

I feel like the best way to really explain this is to give a personal example. I think that all things feminine are really sexy. The things that amp me up are simple, and while they are not unique to me, they are what I really like.

I love when my girl sends me texts telling me about what underwear she's wearing. What color it is. Things like this. I like hearing about if her bra and underwear are matching. If people at work can see she's wearing a thong through her dress, etc.

This is just one aspect of my sexuality, but I have dated girls that get into it and girls that tell me it's weird. Since probably 80% of guys love these kinds of texts, I know that I'm not the weird one. But it shuts down my sexuality. The first time a girl tells me that something that is part of my sexuality is weird, she diverts the course of our relationship.

Sometimes we do things sexually that aren't our favorite because we want the person we are with to feel amazing.

I once had a girl in my life that I would send the same text to all the time. "Color of the day?" And then she would tell me what color underwear she was wearing and simple things like this. But it kept me thinking about her all day. Every day. Every once in a while, she would tell me she was wearing nothing and I would almost crash my car when I got that text.

She really knew about subtlety and she would only send me a text like that every few weeks at MOST. That's what made it so powerful. And she was willing to dig into my fantasy a little bit and tease me. She would text that she forgot to put on underwear and she hopes her boss doesn't notice. She's worried that she might get her skirt caught on something and just who knows what might happen.

My heart is racing right now writing that.

I completely understand if reading that paragraph wasn't sexual for you. But it certainly was for me. You want to learn how your man's sexual brain works and then create the scenarios that get him thinking. This girl never sent me pictures of her underwear, so there was a big part of me that wondered if she was making it all up. And it kept me ENTHRALLED.

2. Draw him into your fantasies too

It's the modern world. Women are allowed to have orgasms now. So act like it.

Men want to know what your fantasies are. This is an area of the relationship where you will probably have to lead. And that's ok. Because if you are the one woman who connects with him on a fantasy level, then guess what, he'll be addicted to you.

Men have no understanding of what turns women on.

NONE.

If you don't believe me, ask a man to send you a sexy photo.

At least 99 out of 100 men, and maybe all 100, will send you a picture of their dick.

I don't know everything about women. No man really does. But I know enough to know that that's not what most women mean when they think of sexy.

If you're still not convinced, ask him to send you a sensual photo. It's still going to be a picture of his dick. It just might be by candlelight. ;)

So you have to be the teacher. You want to slowly introduce him to your fantasies and you will be amazed by how far he will go to be the main character. Just like in the last section I said you should let him express his sexuality, even if it's not your main thing, he'll return the favor now.

You need to be comfortable with your sexuality. Maybe you need to slowly release it. Or maybe he will get pulled in right away. But if you never let him see your real sexuality, then he will never get drawn in.

You might be wondering right now why I'm talking about all of this in a book about texting. It's because in the Western world we have lost the Art of Erotica. The brain really is the most sexual part of the body. And with words you can plant sexual images that will last for weeks, months or even a lifetime.

You can connect with your man in a way that no other woman in his life ever has before and no woman that he dates in the future will. Using the written word is a way to activate the love/sexual centers of his brain on a continuous basis.

If you want him to be addicted to you, it's important to have a sexual component of your relationships separate from just the bedroom.

3. Make his fantasies come true

Pretty much every guy has the same fantasy – threesome.

I'll tell you right now that about 80% of those guys are really scared that you might actually do it. They can barely please you, how on earth can they please a second woman.

Just because we want something, doesn't mean we have any idea what to do if we actually get it!

I can tell you right now that even though I share this fantasy, the idea of sharing my girl with another woman in real life doesn't appeal to me at all. They are two COMPLETELY separate things for me. And it's the same for most men. We have a strong delineation between fantasy and reality.

This is the perfect opportunity for you to have a second relationship with your man. Why don't you have threesomes with him via text only?

You can invent a friend (do NOT use a real one) and tell him all about her. Create his fantasy in a fantasy world. It can be something that runs parallel to your real world physical relationship.

You can even go so far as to get a second phone and pretend you're the second girl texting him. I can tell you as a man, that a woman who is willing to go that far to connect with me and make my fantasies happen in a SAFE PLACE is not someone I would break up with lightly.

You can create multiple fantasy worlds. Maybe he likes science fiction or vampires or werewolves or robots. How hard is it to integrate them into your sexual texts. You want to weave a tapestry over time. So that he's part of an entire world that only exists between the two of you. This is a powerful place to be.

Who wants to break up with a girl that is both your sexual partner and the fulfiller of your fantasy to make love to a woman who is part robot?

There is a modern misconception that men want all fantasies to be realized.

There are certain things that I enjoy in my fantasy life that would freak me out if they happened in real life. I want them to stay in the fantasy realm. And the world of text is the PERFECT medium for this.

From DATING to BOYFriend

When you are in the beginning stages of your romance, you can use texting for good or evil.

I know a lot of girls who love to play text games. I can tell you right now that this always leads to problems down the line. If you want to use texting to keep track of your man or manipulate him, then you are in the wrong relationship.

The purpose of texting during this phase in your relationship is to build a real connection. To develop a deep rapport with the man you are dating.

There are two really powerful things that texting can help you with in your relationship – getting him to open up and getting him to feel connected to you.

Find Out Who He Really Is

Let's be honest. Men don't like to talk about our feelings. I make a living telling my most intimate stories about my family and my love life and I HATE to talk about my feelings with girls. Just two weeks ago a girl was grilling me about my most intimate and painful memories. I hated it but eventually she broke through and it led to some pretty strong feelings between us. Circumstance kept the relationship from going anywhere, but I learned a powerful lesson.

Getting a man to open up to you will make him fall in love with you.

As much as we hate it, when you finally get through our defenses we become addicted to you. Why? Because we never want to have to go through that experience again. It's so annoying to have to tell a new girl all of my dark secrets and fears and hope that she doesn't reject me when I finally show her who I really am.

When a girl knows my deepest feelings and fears and DOESN'T reject me, she becomes something really special. Now she is different from every other girl on the planet. She is something special. She has started to create an US on a core level. And that is how a real relationship blossoms.

You want to feel like a team. You want to date your best friend. Someone who always has your back. Especially when you are wrong.

Men value loyalty above being right every single time.

This is so important to us that it's a tattoo that I have on my back in Japanese, my second language. The tattoo is the Japanese character for loyal or faithful and it combines two characters that mean within and heart. Loyalty is what's within your heart. Or at least it should be.

All men feel this way. No matter how tough we act, at the end of the day we all have the same fear. That when you get to know us, you will reject us.

You can use texting to bypass a man's natural defense barriers and get to know him using a powerful game that I have developed and have been testing a LOT lately. It's a way to get someone to open up without feeling like they are opening up. Men love games (fun ones not mean ones) and within the rules of a game we feel much safer being honest.

Why do you think we love truth or dare so much? ;)

The brilliance of this game is that you don't have to tell the man that you guys are playing. He will just realize it within a few texts and he will start to enjoy it.

It's very simple. Start asking "would you rather" questions.

You can invent your own questions over time, but I know how valuable a good template can be, so I will share with you some of my most powerful questions in a moment. The thing that is brilliant about this game is that the questions tell you as much about the man as the answers do. This game can easily turn sexual, sensual, intellectual or philosophical.

Please realize that you aren't going to like all of his answers or his questions. And if you place hard rejections on those lines of communication, he is just going to find someone else to share them with. If I can't talk to my girlfriend about my fantasy of two women, I will find a girl who WILL listen.

I have said this several times but it's really important to remember that there is a HUGE difference for men between fantasy and reality.

I think it's completely ok for you to have your boundaries. Just realize that if he keeps bouncing against your boundaries, maybe he's not the right guy for you. I can't be with a girl who doesn't connect with me in my fantasy world and in the world of my dreams. There's nothing wrong with being incompatible with someone. There are millions of women I am completely wrong for. I only need to be right for one.

So let me share some of my most powerful questions:

Intro Questions

- ❖ Would you rather have one arm or one leg?
- ❖ Would you rather having a ringing in your ears or a red light constantly flashing in the corner of your eye?
- ❖ Would you rather go into outer space or to the bottom of the ocean?
- ❖ Would you rather be able to speak to animals or read minds?
- ❖ Would you rather vacation on a beach or in the mountains?
- ❖ Snowboarding or Surfing?
- ❖ Would you rather be loved and forgotten or despised and remembered for eternity?
- ❖ Would you rather be invisible but people can touch you or visible but nothing can touch or harm you?
- ❖ Would you rather ride a horse or a dolphin?
- ❖ Would you rather solve a crime or find a lost treasure?
- ❖ If you were dating a mermaid, would you want bottom or top half fish?
- ❖ Would you rather have an extra arm or an extra leg?

Relationship Questions

- ❖ Would you rather spend six months with the girl of your dreams before she dies or a lifetime in mediocre relationships?
- ❖ If you could travel in time but only go in one direction would you go forward or backward?
- ❖ Would you rather look amazing and know it or not look amazing but have someone think you are?
- ❖ Sunrise or sunset?
- ❖ Would you rather be in love or know that someone loves you?
- ❖ All sons or all daughters?
- ❖ Get married in a church or on a beach in paradise?
- ❖ Would you rather have a huge wedding or a yearlong honeymoon?

Sexual Questions

- ❖ If you had two penises, would you want side by side or one on top of the other?
- ❖ Would you rather have three small testicles or one giant one?
- ❖ Do you prefer to finish first or second?
- ❖ What's your ultimate fantasy?

These are just a small smattering of questions that I have used quite successfully via text. What you want to do is use these questions as the seeds for conversation. Almost all of these are from text conversations I have had with a girl that I'm really connecting with right now. All of these messages led to deeper conversations and I already feel a deeper connection with her and vice versa.

You don't have to use all of these texts in one big power session. What you really want to do is to integrate them into your text communications. These are great for late night sessions when you guys are apart.

Make sure that you start off with the intro questions and see in which direction the conversation flows. You will be surprised what you can learn about the man in your life. Each of these questions actually has a very deep undertone and will reveal a LOT about the person you are communicating with.

These questions should be enough seed ideas to help you develop your own questions and he is going to start asking them back to you. Now you are having a super deep, real conversation with a man who hates talking about his feelings.

He is going to open up and feel really connected with you. And that's good for both of you.

The Final Phases

I'm not married but I have a ton of friends who are, including T Dub.

What I can tell you is that a lot of people let parts of their relationship drift away when they have been married for a long time. I don't know any married guy who wouldn't love to get sexy texts from the woman in his life.

If you want to inoculate your man against other women, and if your guy is great other women are going to approach him, then you want to do two things. As we talk about extensively in Girl Gets Ring, you want to make him feel like you're his biggest fan. And bringing that into his text life is so easy it's going to blow your mind. The second thing you want to do is short-circuit any sexual texts a woman might send.

You know how you feel when your man stops buying you flowers and telling you how great your butt looks today? He feels the same way when you stop appreciating him or sending sexy texts.

I want you to take a moment and envision your worst nightmare. There is a new sexy secretary at the office. She has a killer body. She is ten or even twenty years younger than you and she wants your man. And she is going to go after him.

What will her texts to him be like? She's going to text him naughty messages about her panties. About how horny she is. About how she has an itch she can't scratch. And she's also going to text him about how amazing he was in the meeting today. How he's the real reason the company is doing so well.

We don't have to dig too deep into this nightmare scenario, but what I want you to do is provide your man with all the things this girl is going to try and do. Now why is he going to go for affirmation somewhere else, when you are meeting his deepest desires on every level?

If you are sending him sexy texts all the time, when he gets one from her he's going to be like, "I already got this text." And he's going to be FAR LESS tempted. Think of your affirmation texts as your shield and your sexy texts as your sword. The more you affirm him the more he's going to want to keep your respect and admiration. The more you send him sexy texts, the less serious he's going to take her. If you control your husband's fantasy life, then there won't even be room for her.

You need to realize something very important. Your age and experience are a MAJOR advantage. You know what your man likes and doesn't like. You already know how to please him. Younger girls are really awful in bed. If he has to start with some new young girl he has to spend ages training her. And that's just such a hassle.

So use your edge! Use that sword to keep him addicted to you.

As far as appreciation, he just wants to know that he is your hero.

Here are some texts that you should start sending:

- ❖ I'm proud of you today.
- ❖ I know you work hard to take care of me (and the kids) and I love you so much for it.
- ❖ Sometimes I think about how lucky I am that you're my man.
- ❖ All my friends are jealous of how amazing you are.
- ❖ I know that the company would fall apart without you.
- ❖ When you're in that meeting today, know that I'm at home waiting for you.

You can even mix affirmation texts with sexy texts and then you will really be destroying the competition.

When you get home from work today, I'm going to be naked.

You work so hard. The kids are at my sisters. Come home and ravage me.

Your man is in love with you with his heart and soul. These texts will give you his body and mind as well. You CAN be the woman he fantasizes about. And you SHOULD be. You're amazing and sexual and wonderful and lovely. So feel free to remind him.

Be His Fantasy

A few years ago I was really close to proposing to my girlfriend. The only reason that I didn't was that my visa was running out and we were going to be forced into a long distance relationship. And I am just not a real fan of those. Although if you are in that situation, texting is crucial.

I was in a bar about an hour away from her with some of my dating students talking to women. There was a really cute girl and I was flirting, because that's what I do. My girl sent me about eight naked pictures in a row. Including one where she wrote "Jonathan I wish you were here" on a piece of paper with a big arrow pointing down...

That's a super intimate moment for me because I turned to my friends and said, "Holy crap. I'm in love with my girlfriend."

It was in that moment, when I was away from her talking to the competition that I felt the strongest connection with her.

Sexy Texts

- ❖ My vagina misses you.
- ❖ Sometimes when you are at work, I smell your shirts and touch myself.
- ❖ I wish you were inside me right now.
- ❖ Me and my best friend were just trying on lingerie together. Wish you were here!
- ❖ I can't decide if I should wear panties today, what do you think?
- ❖ Send a picture of your breasts and say, "they were missing you."

The longer you have been in a relationship without sending sexual texts, the more you should ease into the process. You can start by sending affirmation texts for a few weeks. Then start merging them with slightly sexual affirmation texts and then build to a crescendo of super sexual texts.

Despite what you may have heard, men can always be retrained.

You may be feeling a little uncomfortable with how sexual some of these texts take things. But let's take a look at the ultimate book of morality: the Bible. Look what Solomon said about how a man should feel about his wife in Proverbs 5:19

"... Let her breasts satisfy thee at all times; and be thou ravished always with her love."

You are his woman. He should aim all of his sexual desire at you. As much as you want emotional communication with your man, realize that he expresses his emotions through his sexuality.

Maybe you don't like the religion angle. That's ok. Tony Soprano was talking to his therapist and she asked why he needed to have a mistress. And he said that his wife is the mother of his children and there are certain things he just can't do with her.

She wasn't willing to be his sexual fantasy so he had to go somewhere else. And look how that turned out....

Conclusion

You can either use texting to tell your man to pick up some milk or you can use it to connect with him and make your relationship stronger. You now have the tools so it's completely your choice.

You can have the relationship you want. You just have to be willing to take action.

Throughout the story of your relationship, texting can be a powerful tool that you use to get through each phase on your path to the ring. You can be the girl who texts her way into a life with the man of her dreams.

It's never too late to bring texting into your relationship and when you do it the right way you can build something that lasts for the ages. Men are shy about their feelings, their desires and their sexuality. We are all afraid of being judged.

So texting is a way to bypass his fears and connect with him on every level. You should and can be his emotional and sexual fantasy. You can be the woman he thinks about when he masturbates. So why not do it? You are amazing and beautiful and wonderful.

The very fact that you are reading this book and made it all the way to the conclusion shows that you know what you want and aren't afraid to take action. And that makes you extraordinary.

If you use texting the right way you can take that man you just went on a date with and turn him into a husband who's addicted to you. One who rushes home from work even after twenty years of marriage to ravage you. And when other women come sniffing around, you can laugh in their faces. Because you are in his real life and his fantasy life.

You are the Girl Who Gets the Ring. Now be the Girl Who Gets the Text.
